extended by the churches at Milledgewille and Thomson.

The principal feature of the last day's session, outside the routine clos. ing work, was the adoption of resolutions introduced by Dr. J. E. Dickey, president of Emory coffege, reaffirming the belief of the members of the conference in the 25 articles of faith as set forth in the book of discipline. Resolutions expressive of the faith imposed in Bishop Duncan by the ers he answered briefly that the man members of the conference, and their love for him, were also adopted. The resolutions set forth the admiration felt for Bishop Duncan and commended him for his impartiality.

Resolutions were also passed expressing the thanks of the conference to W. S. Witham, of Atlanta, for his wift of $5,000 to the loan fund of Lathe aid of needy girls.

STANTON'S KIND HEART.

Two Incidents That Show His Tenderness and Consideration.

Edwin M. Stanton, secretary of war during and after the civil war, impressed many who came to him with appeals for aid as a stern and even heartless copal church, south, which convened man. He was frequently contrasted here last Wednesday, came to a close with President Lincoln as be very opposite in mercy and gentfeness. Invitations were show that he sometimes suffered as bitterly as those whose requests he felt compelled to refuse.

> "I went to the war office after 10 o'clock one night to consult Mr. Stanton," says a former clerk. "I found the mother, wife and children of a soldier who had been condemned to be shot as a deserter on their knees before him, pleading for the life of their. loved one. He listened, standing, in cold and austere silence. At the end of their heartbreaking sobs and praymust die. The crushed and despairing little family left, and Mr. Stanton turned, apparently unmoved, and walked into his private room.

> One cannot help hoping that this deserter may have been one of those whose lives President Lincoln spared by overruling the decision of his secretary of war.

A more cheerful view of the great secretary is given by a fellow lawyer who knew him before the war.

"He was traveling by steamer on the and Westmann. Mr. Rouivier to whom, Ohio to Pittsburg when he saw a man

"'Why is that sufferer not attended te? he demanded of the captain, who replied that the man lived in Pittsburg, then nearly a hundred miles ahead, and would receive attention

"From a carpenter's chest Mr. Stanton promptly secured a saw and a hatchet with which to cut splints. Taking a sheet from a stateroom he set and bandaged the fracture. He then brought vinegar and water from the cook's room with which to steep the swollen parts and all the way to Pittsburg sat by the side of the injured man, applying the bath. When the boat reached Pittsburg he hired a carringe and took the man home."

Fashions In Beards.

English history is rich in examples of the way in which fashion in beards has changed from time to time. The spies sent out by Harold reported that the Norman invaders "did almost seem to be priests, because they had all their face and both lips shaven," which is confirmed in the Bayeux tapestry. It = was to distinguish themselves from 2 their hated conquerors that the English wore their hair long. Stow speaks of long hair as well as beards in Henry I.'s reign, "Men contended with women in their long haires, and when this decayed through old age they knit about their heads certain rolls and braidings of false hair." The monk Wulstan described the practice of wearing the hair long as "immoral, criminal and beastly." When one of his long haired flock knelt for his blessing, it is said that he would whip out a knife and cut off as many of the tresses that lay under his consecrating hand as he could manage in the rather limited time at his disposal,
